Different interpretation of this section of the Code might be made if a fight were made by saloonkeepers to have their bars open on Monday, but the ruling of yesterday seems to have afforded general satisfaction among the majority of the saloonkeepers, and it will not be questioned.

The matter had been under consideration several days. Liquor dealers had constantly called up Chief Werner, or visited his office, to be informed as to what they must do, and most of them appeared to be willing to observe Monday as a holiday. The matter was yesterday taken under serious advisement; the law was looked up, and, under the section maned, the situation appeared to be fully covered. Saloonkeepers who had been desirous of closing, law or no law, have, therefore, the satisfaction of knowing that all competitors, especially those who had desired to keep a long of the property of the sales of the sal

After being out for more than two hours, the jury in the case of John !! Lyons against Miller & Co., which has been on trial in the City Circuit Court for the past three days, failed to agree and was adjourned over to this morning at 10 o'clock, when a further effort will be made to reach a verdict.

Mr. Lyons seeks damages in the sum of $19,000, claiming loss through the action of the brokerage firm in selling certain stocks belonging to him without his order. Miller & Co. claim that the stock was being handled on a margin; that the margin became exhausted and that their contract (lid not require them to be responsible for Mr. Lyons's trades, and they therefore sold his stock practically regardless of the market. The case has presented some difficult legal points, the greater part of yesterday being taken up in the argument.
